I CAN'T SEE! MY OTHER CAR HAS

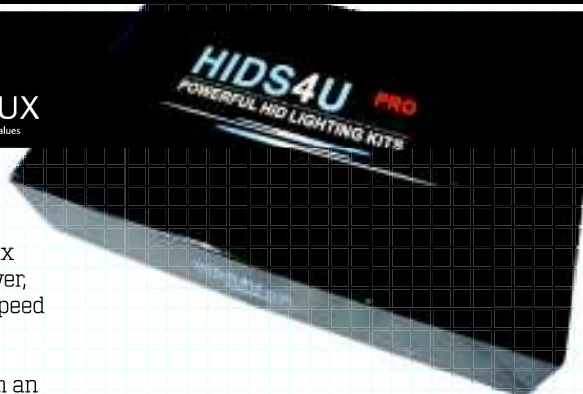

Xenon headlights, which are great when there is no light in the sky, but because my Caddy was made in the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia, they used candles for lamps, and wax for solder. The last straw came when I didn't see the size of a speed bump, and ripped my exhaust off.

I limped home and promptly typed "HIDs" into Google, and it came up with HIDs4U.co.uk. Their website is really easy and quick to use, I just selected my vehicle from the list, and voila, there is so much choice but I went for the Pro Max 55W kit for immense power, and it turned up at the speed of light, ha ha, get it?

The box looks like something you'd get from an upmarket jeweller, with English instructions to boot. And the kit looks very professional and well made.

Fitting was a doddle as it was all plug and play, the only thing that took me any time was trying to figure out where the ballasts would look best in the engine bay.

After fitting I went for a drive in the dark and the difference is incredible, I can see so much more and things are so much brighter, about 3 times brighter I'd say, and they only use 35Watts of power which is a bonus.
